

ASH® | Education

NEW HEMETALKS EPISODE

Inclusion of those with Duffy-null Associated Neutrophil Count (DANC) in Clinical Trials

Andrew Hantel, MD, MPH
Harvard Medical School

Lauren Merz, MD, MSc
University of Michigan

HEMETALKS

Conversations in Hematology Education

DUFFY NULL PHENOTYPE

- The Duffy-null phenotype is found in 10% of people in the US but it's often misunderstood, leading to inappropriate dose modifications, unnecessary procedures, and exclusion from potentially life-saving therapies.

CLINICAL TRIALS MISS THE MARK

- Standard ANC thresholds can wrongly exclude Duffy-null participants or mislabel them as neutropenic.
- Accounting for Duffy-null biology ensures equitable eligibility and more accurate safety data.

ASH® | Education

Tune In!

Get practical insights to better interpret neutrophil counts, advocate for equitable trial access, and optimize treatment decisions for patients with the Duffy-null phenotype.

HEMETALKS

Conversations in Hematology Education